Charlie and the Chocolate Factory was written in 1964. It is a children's book written by Roald Dahl. He is selected with four other children to visit the chocolate factory owned by the famous Willy Wonka. Charlie lived in a tiny house with his grandparents and parents.

Willy Wonka had hidden a Golden Ticket in five chocolate bars and sent them to different places all over the world. Those who found the tickets would visit the chocolate factory with one person to accompany and finally one of them would win a prize. Charlie luckily found a Golden ticket. He took his grandpa with him. Along with four other children who found the Golden Tickets and the persons accompanying them, he was taken to different parts of the factory. They visited the Chocolate room, the Inventing room and the Nut room and other sections with Willy Wonka. One by one, the selected children got eliminated.
